DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1, 2, 4, and 7-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Emilsson (US-4575159).

Regarding claim 1, Emilsson discloses a brake cylinder and a piston in and dividing the brake cylinder (79) into an application pressure chamber and a release pressure chamber (fig 8); an overflow valve (81) connecting the two pressure chambers, the overflow valve capable of being opened at least during a portion of both transition phases between the application position and the release position until essentially a pressure balance exists between the two pressure chambers and is otherwise closed; and ventilation (83) and bleeder valves (82) connected to the two chambers for pressurizing and bleeding the two pressure chambers (fig 8), the ventilation and bleeder valves are closed during the opening time of the overflow valve, and a pressure buildup or a pressure reduction exceeding the pressure balance in the two pressure chambers takes place by opening or closing the ventilation and bleeder valves.

The valves of figure 8 are solenoid valves and are capable of being controlled in any manor desired; the functional language has not been attached to any structure that performs that specific action.

Regarding claim 2, see spring actuated piston (fig 8, 16).

Regarding claims 4 and 7, Emilsson discloses wherein the overflow valve is opened until a fraction of a maximally achievable braking force or releasing force has been generated. Any braking system has a maximally achievable braking force and there is always a point in which a fraction of that force is achieved when the valve (81) is opened.

Regarding claims 8 and 9, Emilsson discloses wherein the valves (82, 83) are controlled by a control device (col. 8, line 30). The valves of figure 8 are solenoid valves and are capable of being controlled in any manor desired; the functional language has not been attached to any structure that performs that specific action.
